

June 7, 2011

To Whom It May Concern:

Ingenuity Developments designed and built our suite of offices from base building to the finished space. Mario Viti and his team did an exemplary job throughout the entire process. We had the pleasure of working with a first-class interior design firm who worked seamlessly with the Ingenuity crew who were entirely successful in realizing more than a few modestly adventurous architectural elements, using quality trades and materials, on time and within budget.

As one example, prior to seeing the work complete, I was mildly skeptical of how well some of our high-bay areas would look and function, with suspended ceilings and tall vertical bulkheads. But the Ingenuity folks pulled it off, perfectly, in both design and construction. We now enjoy an office space that appears spacious but that allows our staff to feel connected and collaborative.

Having several mixed experiences with construction companies in the past, my recent experience working with Ingenuity has, for me, raised the bar in terms of what I now know is available in terms of service and quality. Mario's intuitive sense and deep knowledge of methods, costs, and practical "buildability," makes it so he can deliver precisely what he promises—a refreshing turn in an era of underwhelming customer service and unmet expectations. The Ingenuity staff are professional and prompt and always seem to be at your service, even in the trepidacious post-construction period.

What else is there to say except that I would recommend Ingenuity Developments without reservation or qualification and would offer to host any prospective client who may like to take a look.

Sincerely,
Gateway Freight Systems Inc.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Bill Charney", is written over a horizontal line.

Bill Charney
Vice President